On a cold damp stone,
Sats we man alone,
Warry and sed with weeping;
Her young tace lifted.
To heaven, and drifted.
The cold rain-drops on her brow.

Drip, drip, drip,
The cold autumnal rain,
Shudder and crouch, and shrinh,
And wipe thine eyeine again.
Groan, grean, groan,
Lift again thy and eyes!
Drip, drip, drip,
And mingle thy tears with the skies,

Sigh, sigh, righ, Till it echoes down in thy heart; If reclaim to the control of the church-ward skeletons start.

I he church-ward skeletons start.

Keep, weep, weep,

r bread in this city of wealth,
here "B-habe" fession in silk,
here "Dives" is ciad by stealth.

On, on, on;
The rich and proud may pass,
And thou may at shiver,
And thou may at shiver,
And the intere and freeze—alas!
Starve, starve, starve,
Diel and fester! and ro!!
The realing worm will fove thee then,
For that is humanify's lot!

Gnaw, gnaw, gnaw, Gmass at thy fleshiess tones! A church-sgire rises above thy head, Thy seat is its stopping atones! Shriek, shrick, shrick, Hunger! the ravenous ghoul, its eating fitted thy heart. And drinking thy blood from his bowl!

Crouch! crouch! crouch!
And cleuch thy shriceled hand!
That pale and familized look,
Great God! in this plentiful land!
Gold, gold, gold,
They will cringe and bow at the shrine!
But trample and score-yes, spura
If poor-the Imago Divine!

Gnaw, gnaw, gnaw,
A skeleton rattles his hones!
A church-spire rises above thy head,
Thy couch is its stepping stones!
Within, God's word, like bread, is sold!
The secrement cups are made of gold,
And the heaviest flee.
In the pride of the fold.

Ding, dlng, dong,
Bow sweetly the chimes are repeating!
While hunger is gnawing
The strings from thy heart;
And famine is stilling its benting—
And this in the midst of a city.
Where theusands are squandlered on dress;
While the poor may subsist upon pily,
And suffer and grown in distress.

Tembs for the Living-Further Horrors of the Papal Prisons.

The Florence Nazione presents us with the summary of a little work entitled the Prisons of Paliano. It is the record of the experience of several political prisoners, written in the Pontifical dungeons of Paliano. These tombs for the living are now, thanks to recent events, empty. One prisoner writes:

In the fort of Paliano there are about 200 political prisoners, dressed like the criminals condemned to the galleys, and, like them, shaved. They are divided into five sections. Those condemned for life are shut up in cells, about nine spans wide and about six-tees long, including the little table of brickwork. Other cells, about three spans wider, contain three prisoners; and others, not much larger, have seventeen all huddled together. In the first of these there is a small grating over and opposite the door, through which the food is introduced. The other cells have one window, and sometimes two, with an opening of about four spans in breadth and one in hight, and through this the prisand one in hight, and through this the pris-oners are fired upon if it be necessary to keep them quiet. The food and hospital arrangements were villainous. The patients are neglected and ill-treated. The medical attendants will hardly ever send a patient to the hospital, and when they do send him they almost always keep him on strict diet. Perhaus they have a servet understanding Perhaps they have a secret understanding with those who contract for the food. One day, when some complaints were made on account of the bad soup in the hospital, the person who made the complaint was taken by two keepers, and, by dist of blows and kicks, was forcibly thrust along into the darkest dungeons, and there detained many days by order of the governor. When some prisoner at the point of death refuses to re-ceive a confessor, he is removed into a solitary cell, and there, after having heaped upon him a thousand outrages, orders are given to one of the lowest turnkeys to kill him by suffication. The fact is known from the confession of the turnkey himself, who, or one occasion, refused to be a party to this barbarity. The corpse is interred in the in-terior of the fort, and the governor is present at the funeral. Sometimes he gives a kick to the head of the corpse, and commits similar outrages.

GENERAL JACKSON'S RUDENESS TO A WO MAN.—Mrs. Fairfield, in her autobiography, tells a story of Andrew Jackson, not much to the credit of the old hero. He had subscribed for a copy of her husband's works, and was owing her fifteen dollars. She called on him at the White House for it, and was ushered into a room where the President and his cabinet were in session. She pre-cented her bill, but on looking at it, the General said that before it could be paid her husband must redress a calumny in a number of his magazine, upon a friend of the President, General Coffee, "one of the noblest specimens of God's works." He swore his usual oath, "by the Eternal." that unless an apology was made, not a dollar of the debt should ever be paid. The poor woman could only say that she supposed her husband had written what he believed to be just, which had been a severe condemnation of Gen. Coffee for his cruel treatment of the General said that before it could be paid her of Gen. Coffee for his cruel treatment of the Indians, burning their wigwams and exterminsting their women and children, and withdrew. But the debt was never paid.

Mrs. Fairfield is well known here, where she is regarded as an impostor, having obtained subscriptions for her husband's works over and over again, without ever delivering

A Venerable English Literatym.—The literary man who has made the pen a profession longest, now alive, is Cyrus Redding, of England, who has just been fifty-five years in activity, and has probably written more than any living co temporary. He was personally acquainted with Lewis, Walcott, Topham, Susridas, Canning, Scott, Wilson, Hogg, Moore, Campbell, etc., with numerous distinguished foreigners, and characters, not literary, but eminent in the arts and philosophy. He may be called a link between the man of the past and present in the same profession. His first printed essay bore date 1804, and he is yet in health. Besides contributing to most of the best known periodicals of the past, and editing above a hundred volumes besides, from thirty to forty of which he was the author, he established six newspapers, which he edited A VENERABLE ENGLISH LITERATES.-The tablished six newspapers, which he edited, in England, one his own. He also edited one in France, and was connected with five others in this country. He wrote in nearly all the principal periodicals up to 1852. What is more singular, he set out in support of Liberal principles when all was against them, and he lived to see them triumphant when in his gray hairs.

ONE Cause of the Loss of Vernela.—In a case recently fried in England, it was shown that a package of spothecaries wares, shipped for India, contained a bottle of sweet spirits of niter, which bolls at a very low temperature, and is so explosive and inflammable that one gallon would be sufficient to destroy several men-of-war. Many ships are no doubt lost by the spontaneous combustion of chemicals on board, and perhaps the mysterious fire on the Comanghi occurred from some such cause.

Queen Churms Currous.—Haif the boats on the water are pulled by children. At the age of four they pull an oar, and the women work boats quite as well as men, and few are without a laby strapped to the back, and recked as in a cradle. The Chinese can not make a garment by measure; but with a pattern you may depend upon a fit. They have no originality, but can copy any thing exactly, even photographs.

New Explanation of the Metempsychosis Feenlar Conversion of an Old Stener. The New York correspondent of a Western aper tells the following story for the benefit of some hard cases:

He says he once knew a man by the name of Reed, commonly known as "Old Reed," Reed was quite notorious in his way, and his religious belief was, that after death he should respect in the form of an animal, and thought he would be a horse. Now, "Old Reed" was a hard man, and was not in the habit of treating his family as a religious man should. One day after his wife had suffered his abuse as long as humanity could endure, she concluded to give him a brief talking to—to touch him upon his religious belief. So, resolutely seating herself by his side, and looking him full in the face, while a tear-drop glistened in her eye—for she was f some hard cases: a tear-drop glistened in her eye—for she was serious and thought perhaps he was correct in his faith—she commenced: "Reed, I wish to have a serious talk with you; I have

Figureial Affairs. In Monetary matters we look for no special improvement this week upon that just past, though we think the feeling may be better among Capitalists and Monied Operators, as the longer the action of the Southern cotton States respecting their much-talked-of se-cession is postponed, the more belief in an cession is postponed, the more belief in an entirely nugatory result will be increased. Here, Money is regarded as close, but there is more supply than there is confidence, which at present we greatly need. Bankers are atill uneasy in regard to the political fature of the country, and are waiting for the end of the present beginning before they make extensive operations. The prevailing rates of interest are 12@15 per cent, for approved short Paper, and are more likely to dull and beny at Magaze. for Westers, Canadian and State.

Friday's New York Evening Post says of

Friday's New York Evening Post says of the Stock market opened rather steady on the speculative shares, but toward the close is heavy. The transactions were not large, and a very dail feeling prevailed at the adjournment of the Board. The weak spot of the smarket is the State and Government Stock and Bank shares. These are materially lever to-day, though some descriptions are not forced at the quotations. North Carolinas solid at 55, which is a decline of 5 per cent, on pravious sales; Californias dropped to 50, Tennessees to 70-k6705; Louislans othered at 75% Missouris at 73. Government Fives of 1674 are offered at 100, the Sixes of 1682 at 162, the Sixes of 1607 at 100, the Sixes of 1682 at 1625.

The same number of the Evening Post thus refers to Money, in New York, on Friday: refers to Money, in New York, on Friday:

The absence of unfavorable rumors in regard to matters at the South has imparted to the Money market a more subdued appearance, though we are unable to report any abatement in the rates of Paper; on the contrary, first-class names have been bought at 1620 per cent, dearer than pesterday. Small lots of "glit-edge" have been taken at 10 per cent, but the built of the business in highest grade is done at 12 per cent. Oalt Loans, if any thing, are rather easier at 7 per cent.

The depression in Sterling Exchange is unalleviated, and the leading drawers are accepting much lower terms. We have of first-class Bills on Load don aclling at 1005/25/1051.
